WRITTEN AT RANDOM.

"I first met old Jake Dunning away back in 1836," reminisces remarked Col. L. B. Dunning yesterday. "I was a boy, and it was up in Crittenden county. I had a little two foot shot gun hanging when I came across some line pencils, I had been taught never to take pencils or anything else from a man's orchard without permission, so I went in and there I found Jake. He was a sort of squatter, Jake was, and I found him turning bullets, while a long, thin-necked rille with a walnut stock hung in a rack near the mantle.
Yes, he was turning bullets, and when I asked him if I could have a few pencils he said 'of course, you can have all you want. If you find plenty and I was to ask you for some and you'd say no, I know it would mean he had, and I guess if I'd refuse you, you'd feel bad, too."

"Just heard we're going to have war," he then said. "Mexico's declared war against the United States, the Indians have joined her, and I guess the Whigs will join them. Altogether, I guess they'll give us Democracy!"

"I guess you'll be pretty well fixed for it," ventured, "turning bullets and provided with a ready gun."

"Yes, and a gun as good as any man's," he said as he glanced proudly up at the old weapon.

"I got my pencils and saw no more of Jake Dunning. I guess he went to the Mexican war. In 1885, however, fifty years later, I was up here in Dymondburg, Crittenden county, when I saw a caravan of wagons, the most dilapidated carts and vehicles you ever saw! There were ponies, dogs in almost countless numbers, and twenty or thirty barefooted women, and about as many men."

"What is that?" I asked.

"That old Jake Dunning and his family going to Arkansas," they told me. "Then his sons and daughters and their wives and husbands."

"And so it proved to be. Jake had changed mightily in those fifty years, and I guess he himself couldn't have counted his progeny. That's the last I ever heard of him. I guess he's long since gone to his last rest and probably left his progeny, horses and dogs, scattered all over the wilds of Arkansas."

"In speaking of regulating the digging of streets," remarked a gentleman yesterday, "we also need an ordinance governing weights. Those streets could be kept in much better condition if no more than the proper loads were hauled over them.
There's no reason why such an ordinance should not be passed. It would save much money to the city in street repairs, and break up the practice of piling three loads of material or merchandise on one little wagon."

Billy Francis is a son of Overseer of the Chain Gang John Francis, and carries water to the prisoners while they are at work on the streets.
He is a very small boy, and when he has a few leisure moments, employs them often in playing with the shovels and cleaning the gutters for pasture.

A day or two ago he was out shoveling in the gutter when a lady in the lower part of town espied him and rushed into the house with an exclamation of horror.

"John," she breathlessly declared to her husband, "I wish you'd go out and look what a little boy they've got on the chain gang! It's a shame, an outrage, and he shan't work another minute. Go out and find what his name is, and I'll pay his fine myself!"

John went out to investigate, and when he returned to report, he no doubt muttered something about people making fools of themselves over nothing.

A man with a patch over his nose and numerous gashes distributed artistically about his countenance shambled into Justice Winchester's office yesterday.

"What's the matter?" somebody sympathetically inquired, as they caught sight of his physiognomy.

"Aw, nothin but them steers of mine," he replied with a painful attempt to smile.

"How'd it happen?"

EXCELLENT PERFORMANCE.

"Lady Audley's Secret" Drew a Packed House.

Appearance of Mr. Charlemagne Koehler, Another Amusement Notes.

A more enthusiastic or better pleased audience never dispersed than the one which left Casino theatre last night, after witnessing the second performance of "Lady Audley's Secret" with Miss Lillian O. Bowen in the title role.

The theatre was packed, and many who were late in getting out had to stand.

Miss Bowen's acting was a feature of the performance, and was best appreciated by those who knew what strength, tact and intelligence it required so cleverly to play the part.

Mr. George W. Wright, as "Lank Marks," the tipsy inn-keeper, showed his many friends and admirers what he could do, and gave a better interpretation than on the preceding night. Mr. Harry Driscoll as Robert Audley, was a great favorite with an audience that appreciated his efforts to fathom the mysterious disappearance of his friend, George Talboys, which part was cleverly played by Mr. Oliver Fiske, who is not only a splendid actor but a hustling and up-to-date stage manager.

Mr. Paul Fahlbusch, as Sir Michael Audley, did good work, and the audience was sorry when he made his final exit in the second act.

Miss Laura Dean has already become a great favorite by her jolly, clever manner of acting, and as Alicia Audley has a part for which she is eminently fitted.

Miss Nellie McDonough, as Phoebe Marks, Lady Audley's maid, proved her ability to give a faultless representation of the character. Miss McDonough is a charming little actress and is winning many admirers.

One of the hits of the evening, however, was made by Mr. Charlemagne Koehler, the eminent tragedian and actor, who is a visitor here. By request he recited, "How Salvador Won the Race," and the audience almost went wild. He responded to an encore by the impersonation of an old maid and was compelled to answer to another, for which he gave a laughable representation of the country boy saying his "piece." He was called again, "but would not go," because they seem to like it so.

Manager Foppe then announced that "David Garrick" would be played next week with Mr. Koehler in the title role, he having consented to remain over.

The fire scene in the third act was pronounced by all present to equal, if not surpass, any fire scene ever witnessed at Mo. T. Opera house. It was magnificent, and a credit to Mr. Ellis Bonn, whose skill in pyrotechnic displays is well known to Paducahans.

The crowd's continue to increase at Ramona, and the theatre is to be enlarged to accommodate them. Mr. Koehler will appear again tonight.

There was another good crowd at La Belle Park last night to witness "Tag, the Outcast." There will be a change of programme tomorrow night.

The last rehearsal of "Queen Esther" will take place at the opera house tonight. The production will be well attended tomorrow night at Ramona's opera house.

There was a full rehearsal of "David Garrick" at Casino theatre this morning. Mr. Charlemagne Koehler will appear as David Garrick, the actor. Mr. W. H. Wright will play the part of Mr. Ingot; Mr. Fahlbusch, Mr. Jones; Manager Foppe, Mr. Smith; Mr. Harry Driscoll, "Squire Chivy"; Miss Bowen will play Adah Angel; Miss Laura Dean, Mrs. Armistead Brown. This will be the finest production of the play ever witnessed here.

The closing exercises of St. Mary's Academy will take place Friday night. There is but one graduate, Miss Bella Mohan, who has attended the academy for several years, and is one of the brightest and most talented.

Supply and Demand.

High prices increase the production of any article and lessen the consumption; hence low prices decrease the production and increase the consumption.

Many manufacturers expected better times and bigger sales and made too much stuff for the spring and summer trade of 1907. The manufacturer's way out of such a dilemma is to cut the price to induce somebody to use up the stuff. We are among the few cash buyers who have bought up these goods to sell to our customers at half prices. Out of self defense many merchants will claim to own goods at our low prices, but the only safe way is to come here and see. Lawns are here for 2c and 3c and 4-4c, that were double.

Beautiful wash goods we have seen elsewhere for 10c, are now here for 5c a yard.

Handsome ones that were 20c are here for 10c.

Taffeta mulls that were 25c early are now here for 12 1-2c.

Leather belts, all colors, that were 50c, now here for 25c.

Ladies' vests that were 5c, now 3c. Very handsome vests are here for 7 and 8c. Bleached table linens that were 40c now here for 25c.

Other table linens very low. Hand towels at 4, 9 and 12 1-2c; very special. Dotted swisses and dotted dimities, manufacturer's seconds that you can hardly tell from the firsts, worth 20c, for 10c a yard.

Choice apron check ginghams at 3 1-2, 4 and 4 1-2 a yard. Calicoes at 3 1-2, 4, 4 1-2 and 5c yard.

18c unbleached 10-4 sheeting for 12 1-2c yard. Ready made bleached sheets for 35c to 45c, worth double.

Soft finished yard wide bleached domestic at 4, 4 1-2, 5, 6 1-2, 7 and 7 1-2c a yard. Ladies' fast black hose that were 20c, now 12 1-2c.

The world's unequalled seamless fast black, 3 for 25c. The early seasons' 10c sort, now four pairs for 25c.

LOOKING FOR TROUBLE.

Annie Mitchell on Lock of 14. This afternoon.

Annie Mitchell, a young girl, was arrested by Officer T. W. at Ninth and Court about 2 o'clock this afternoon on a charge of assaulting

George Dickson, colored.

The officer said he reached the girl just in time to prevent her from hitting the man. She was very reluctant and the handcuffs had to be put on her. Then she almost twisted the officer's fingers off before the lockup was reached.
